THE TARIFF NOT A TAX.

William L. Wilson's "Inexorable Logic of Facts" Answered.

THE REMOVAL OF THE SUGAR TAX

And the Consequent Cheapening of the Article Does not Show that the Tariff Raises the Prices on Other Protected Articles---Wherein Lies the Difference---Some "Inexorable Logic" Found in Some Other Facts.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

Sin:-Permit a few words "from the other side" in reply, in a general way, to a recent letter of Hon. William L. Wilson in the St. Louis Republic, Mr. Wilson claims that "the removal of the sugar tariff has given us the inexorable logic of facts," which, according to his logic is, that if taking the tariff off sugar cheapened it by so much, taking it off all other articles would cheapen them accordingly-thus holding with the oracle of the sage of Lakewood (his political file leader) that "the tariff is a tax and must be paid by the consumer." Of course the "tariff is a tax," but let us inquire impartially who pays the us inquire impartially who pays the tax, under what conditions it is paid by the consumer and under what conditions by the importer, and under what conditions the cost of the taxed (or protected) article is increased and under what conditions decreased by protection?

Now, I lay it down as an infallible rule—I might with propriety say, an eternal principle—that when the tax is eternal principle—that when the tax is levied upon an article which is not produced in this country, or cannot be produced in sufficient quantity to regulate its price, the importer adds the tax to the market price of his goods, and the consumer must pay it; but when the home production is sufficient to establish and regulate the price, the tax must be paid by the importer—he pays the tariff for the privilege of selling his goods at the price already established, and if his importation has any effect upon the market, it is to lower rather than raise it,—not, however, on account than raise it,-not, however, on account of the tariff, but on the broad principle of the tariff, but on the broad principle of supply and demand. Stimulated by protection, home com-petition sharpened by labor-saving ma-chinery and improved methods, forces the price below the figure previously paid for the imported article, and home production reveals a surplus for export. The result is a cheapening of the article not only in this country, but all over

Keeping these broad principles always in view, we have no difficulty in understanding how taking the tariff off sugar cheapened it, while putting and keeping it on steel rails, plate glass, cotton and woolen goods and numberless other articles have cheapened them. The writer well remembers when his The writer well remembers when his father paid 25 cents per yard, by the bolt, for calico for family use, which can now be bought for 6 to 8 cents. England then monopolized the market, and we had to pay her price or do without. The tariff now on calico, which can be bought at retail for 5 to 8 cents per yard 15 cents per yard is 5 cents per yard. Now if the Britisher brings his calico here and sells it, who pays the the tax? He is not only forced to sell here at the price established by home production and competition, but to sell at home and in the other markets of the world at the same—else we would monopolize them all, for remember, Uncle Sam is a "bil-lion country." The same is literally lion country." true with respect to the other articles, mentioned—steel rails, plate glass, &c. Does any one suppose if England had this monopoly of the trade in these are ticles now, that we could buy calico at less than 25 cents per yard and steel rails at less than $160 per ton without when the above mentioned price (25 cents) was paid for calico the writer's father was hiring a whito man with a family to do all kinds of farm work through the summer, except harvesting, at SS per month; good cows could be at $8 per month; good cows could be bought for $10 per head, sheep for $1 to $1 25, and other farm products in proportion. Now, for the sake of the argument, let us admit that the consumer pays the tax. Political economists estimate that tax. Political economists estimate that on an average about 90 per cent of the cost of manufactured articles is chargeable to the wages of labor. Let us take a ton of steel rails, cost $28. Then $25 20 represents labor. The tariff on this is $13 44. If, according to free trade logic, the consumer pays this tax the cost, less the tariff, would be $14 56. But the entire tariff, representing 533 per cent, would of necessity come off the wages of labor, leaving but $11 76. Are the wage-carners of this country prepared for this condition of things? Protectionists are further able to show that the farmers are more benefited by Protectionists are further able to show that the farmers are more benefited by protection than those following any other branch of industry by withdrawing a large proportion of wage-earners from agriculture and creating a home market for their surplus products, not only of staple, but of perishable articles. It is by the showing of "the inexorable logic of facts" such as these that the protectionist is enabled to claim for his system the maximum of prices for his system the maximum of prices for farm products and wages, and the min-imums of price for manufactured goods.

There never was before a tax bill passed in the history of this or any other country which so offectually re-lieves the consumer and levies the duty upon the importer and at the same time the same time (by its reciprocity clause) opens the (by its reciprocity clause) opens the markets of the world to our surplus products, as the McKinley bill—else, if we pay the tax, why need the foreigner complain? Why are foreign workshops, closed and foreign manufacturers move that the relation that the country? ing their plants into this country? George R. Latham.

BUCKHANNON NEWS.

The Building Boom-New Comers Still Arriving -- Items of Interest, Special Correspondence of the Intelligencer.

BUCKHANNON, W. VA., April 1 .- Spring has opened in earnest. Grass and flowers begin to show themselves and the beautiful hills around the little city are putling on their robes of green.

Along with the spring has come the building season and on all sides is heard the carpenter's hammer. There heard the carpenter's hammer. There are fully twenty houses now in process of erection, and during this year of our Lord 1802 there will probably be 200 buildings erected. The most conservative estimate I have heard puts the number at 150. This must be done, for even now there is a great lack of houses to rent. I think I would be safe in saying that fifty good houses could be rented if they were built. People are coming and going every day prospecting, and many would settle down at once if there were dwellings for rent.

It seems strange to me that men of means do not build enough dwelling houses to accommodate the great rush.

The engine for the new plant was made and placed in position by the Hart Bros, of Clarksburg. It is a beauty.

Among the many other buildings that are being erected the wareroom of the enterprising young hardware mer-chant is worthy of special mention. It is perfectly fire proof, as it sides are iron and the roof tin. He is fast filling it with everything in his line.

Major Hughes is building a planing mill in the maple grove near the Normal Academy building, in which he will place the most improved of modern machinery. It is his intention to do his own work in this line for the many buildings he will build during the buildings he will build during the season.
